MOORILLA

Moorilla was founded by Claudio Alcorso, an Italian textile merchant, in 1947. Ignoring advice that the land was better suited to fruit trees, in 1958 Alcorso and his family planted ninety Riesling cuttings on the site, sourced from David Wynn's South Australian vineyard. In 1962, the vines produced their first yield, which was hand-picked and wild fermented to become the first ever Moorilla vintage. These small quantities of wine sold quickly to private clients and outstanding restaurants, establishing Moorilla as a leader in the cool-climate wine industry. With the acquisition of a second vineyard, St Matthias, on the banks of Launceston's Tamar River, Moorilla's wine production expanded.

In 1995, David Walsh bought Moorilla from the Alcorsos. The Moorilla vineyard is now home to Mona, Walsh's privately owned Museum of Old and New Art (you know the place—Triassic sandstone, mummies and Sidney Nolans, a shit machine). Drink Moorilla there, too, in the Void Bar, thirteen metres underground.

Our winemaker is Canadian-born Conor van der Reest. Since beginning his career on Ontario's Niagara Peninsula, Conor has explored the new and old worlds of wine in the Languedoc and Champagne regions of France, by the Marmara Sea in Turkey, and in Australia's King, Hunter, Alpine and Yarra valleys. He has helped Moorilla and Mona to grow together—a continual evolution of wine and art.

David trusts Conor to do his thing, perhaps because a legit wine expert once described Conor as a 'wild child' of the wine world. At Moorilla, we do what we like. (See? Wild as.) We pull apart established European wine traditions, but we also honour and adapt them (we know where we've come from) to the peculiarities, rich and strange, of Tasmania (no cultural cringe here). You could say that Moorilla and Mona are part of the same beast.

MADEIRA

Sample these treasures direct from the Portuguese archipelago. Madeira is located in the North Atlantic Ocean, just less than four hundred kilometres north of Tenerife, Canary Islands. Grown on volcanic soils, these wines are versatile in nature and can be matched with a great range of foods such as seafood, meat and cheese.

Colheita Single harvest, bottled unblended after five years or more barrel aged.

Frasqueira Vintage Madeira made from single varietal fruit from a single harvest and barrel-aged for over twenty years.

SAKE

60ml glass

SAKE GLOSSARY

JUNMAI 100 per cent pure rice sake without additives such as ethyl alcohol, sugars and starches.

GENSHU Undiluted. Some sake sees dilution with spring water after brewing to lower the alcohol content from 18-20 per cent down to 14-16 per cent, but genshu means that no extra water has been added.

NAMA Unpasteurised.

KIJŌSHU 'Noble brew sake' kijōshu has one of the longest histories within fortifying—much older than port production. Similar characteristics to sherry are often found within these rice wines.

DAIGINJŌ To be classified as daiginjō, the rice grain must be polished down to 50 per cent or less of its original size.

MUROKA Unfiltered sake that does not go through charcoal filtration.

KOSHU Aged sake.

GENSHU ARABASHIRI Meaning 'rough run', the free run liquid of the fresh sake is captured before pressing the rice.
